MANAGEMENT DISCUSSIONS AND ANALYSIS REPORT

Industry Structure and Developments ECONOMIC SCENARIO

World Economic Scenario Almost a decade after the global financial crisis, the world economy seems to be leaving the legacy of the global financial crisis behind and is poised for a convincing recovery in 2018. As per IMF, World growth strengthened in 2017 to 3.8 percent, with a notable rebound in global trade. It was driven by an investment recovery in advanced economies, continued strong growth in emerging Asia, a notable upswing in emerging Europe, and signs of recovery in several commodity exporters.

Global growth is expected to tick up to 3.9 percent this year and next, supported by strong momentum, favourable market sentiment, accommodative financial conditions, and the domestic and international repercussions of expansionary fiscal policy in the United States. The partial recovery in commodity prices should allow conditions in commodity exporters to gradually improve.

Recent course adjustments in major trade relationships, such as the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland's decision to withdraw from the European Union and the United States of America's decisions to renegotiate the North American Free Trade Agreement and to reassess the terms of its other existing trade agreements, have raised concerns over a potential escalation in trade barriers and disputes. These could be amplified if met by retaliatory measures by other countries. An increasingly restrictive trade environment may hinder medium-term growth prospects, given the mutually reinforcing linkages between trade, investment and productivity growth.

The oil market is in the process of rebalancing, as demand growth surpasses supply growth. The level of commercial crude oil stock has already been in decline despite rapid crude production growth in the United States. World crude oil supply expected to record a modest rise with strong demand is expected from China, India and the United States - the world's three largest energy consumers. A recovering demand from Europe is another supporting factor for the solid growth projection coupled with the recent rise in refining margins in Asia, Europe and the Americas throughout 2017.

While the growth outlook for 2018 looks good with emergence of new global players like China, India and formations like Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO), possible stability in oil prices, Saudi Arab charting a new path for itself and rebuilding of Iraq etc. but there are also some other possible downside risks for business to bear in mind, including USA getting into regressive protectionist economy using trade barriers which are expected to face retaliation and counter measures by European countries, China, Canada etc., impact of implementation of Brexit; political uncertainty in large economies due to elections as well as continued geopolitical tensions related to Qatar, Syria, Iran, North Korea and other nations.

Domestic Economic Scenario

The year 2017 was marked by a number of key structural initiatives to build strength across macro-economic parameters for sustainable growth in the future. The growth in the first half of the year suffered due to after effect of the reform process including implementation of GST etc., despite global tailwinds. However, the weakness seen at the beginning of 2017, seems to have bottomed out as 2018 set in. Currently, the economy seems to be on the path to recovery, with indicators of industrial production, stock market index, auto sales and exports having shown some uptick.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) in its latest World Economic Outlook (WEO) has projected India to grow at 7.4% in 2018 and 7.8% in 2019. It also held that India will again emerge as world's fastest-growing major economy at least for the next two years (2019 and 2020).

Over the medium term, India's growth will gradually rise with continued implementation of structural reforms that will raise productivity and incentivize private investment. It will be driven by recovery from transitory effects of currency exchange initiative and implementation of national GST tax and supported by strong private consumption growth. India's progress on structural reforms in recent past, including through implementation of GST will help reduce internal barriers to trade, increase efficiency and improve tax compliance.

The key engines supporting the upturn of Indian growth are largely domestic and policy-driven, though a synchronous upturn in global growth will provide some tailwind. The vectors include resolution of stressed assets in banking driven by National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT), rural rejuvenation, relentless implementation of reforms, initiatives to attract investments across the globe for Make in India initiative, policies to strengthen India' Manufacturing sector like introduction of National Steel Policy, and focus on demand and job creation through spending on rural and labour-intensive infrastructure space is likely to support growth next fiscal, and push demand in the consumer sectors.

OIL & GAS INDUSTRY

GLOBAL SCENARIO

The oil and gas sector is one of the most prominent industries in the world. Since the Industrial Revolution, both oil and gas have played a huge part in bringing power to people all over the world, and shaping modern life as we know it. As a resource that is essential almost everywhere in the world, the production and use of oil and gas remains vital as we move into the 21st century.

Despite this, the sector is also changing. The rise of renewable energy, new technologies, and new methods of extracting hydrocarbons from ever-more elusive sources have all impacted the way in which business is done, as has the fluctuating supply and demand in areas like Saudi Arabia and America. The market is opening up, rebounding from the price crash of 2015, and investment in areas like complex capacity is projected to increase over the years.

Over 2017, the sector recovered from the slump of previous years, with businesses working to decrease their cost bases with the aim of improving efficiency in a fluctuating and unstable market. Though the oil market remains unstable, the average Brent oil price was one third higher this year than in 2016, giving positive signs for the market in 2018. There is currently a higher supply than demand in the market- as Brazil has emerged onto the global scene as an oil producer, competing with America and Saudi Arabia and resulting in consistently low prices for oil over the past few years. However, investment is starting to pick up again, despite the uncertainty that will come with Brexit, and with an increasingly volatile political climate.

However, while the oil prices are getting semblance of stability, gas is enjoying a profound upswing in popularity: an upswing that is almost certain to continue into 2018. With the boom of renewable energy has come an increased focus on low-carbon energy, and this has resulted in the rise of natural gas as a power generation fuel, overtaking coal as a source of energy for the first time: indeed, it's currently growing more quickly than oil or coal.

After several years of oversupply, the oil and gas industry could very well be moving headlong into a supply crunch. This may seem hard to imagine, given the ramping up of U.S. oil production and the burgeoning sense of optimism that is sweeping the sector. In general, the industry feels much healthier than it did 12 months ago: The price of oil has rebounded. After appearing limited to a range between the mid-$40s and $50 per barrel (bbl), Brent crude is now trading near $70. The industry is thus recovering from the brutal last few years of weak prices, enforced capital discipline, portfolio realignments, and productivity efficiencies

India Scenario

India is one of the fastest growing major economies in the world and the third largest consumer of petroleum products, after US and China. Although there is an increased focus on gas and renewables, demand for oil has always been on the rise, and is estimated to grow at least until 2040. As per the report published by India Brand Equity Foundation (IBEF), India's energy demand is expected to double to 1,516 million tonnes of oil equivalent (Mtoe) by 2035 from 723.9 Mtoe in 2016. Moreover, India's share in global primary energy consumption is projected to increase by two-folds by 2035.

India has always been an import dependent nation in the Oil and Natural Gas ("O&NG") sector. India's domestic crude oil production of 36.95 million tonnes in 2015- 16 barely met 20 percent of its oil needs. Natural gas output at 32.249 billion cubic meters meets less than half of its needs. As a result of significant dependence on import, Indian Government has set a target to reduce dependence on crude imports by 10% by 2022.

Given the growing demand for crude oil in India and its wide application in household and industrial activities, it is apparent that there will be major investments in this industry in future. The Government of India has recently revamped the regulatory framework in the upstream sector with a view to attract foreign investment (i.e., a shift from NELP to HELP), and this is also consistent with the government's objective to facilitate ease of doing business in India. While the Government of India resolves teething issues in the O&NG sector, the landscape in the O&NG sector promises to be dynamic with scope for growth of business entities.

WATER INDUSTRY

Global Scenario

Water scarcity, changing demographics and operational efficiency are the top issues for the global water sector, which are amplified by the unpredictable impact of climate change.

Demand for water continues to rise. According to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), by the middle of the century water demand is projected to increase by 55 percent compared with 2015 levels. This increase will mainly be driven by population growth.

Urbanization, dietary and lifestyle changes will also accelerate the growth in demand for water. With rapid population growth expected in parts of Asia, which are already under water stress, these areas face acute water scarcity problems. Declining water quality has also grown as a global concern. It can directly influence the cost of providing water by utilities, reduce the volume of water available for use, and indirectly affect human health. Water loss through leakage is a major issue both in the developed and developing world. The majority of the leakage is due to aging infrastructure. The long term impact of climate change is unpredictable, but many expect it to exacerbate water scarcity, watershed planning and making aging infrastructure even more vulnerable to extreme weather conditions. Therefore, the level of risk that climate change introduces is likely to make water cycle, infrastructure and demand management even more complex and costly.

Ultimately, the world needs flexible and resilient water systems that anticipate and monitor changes in circumstances.

Sustainable management techniques need to be implemented to protect water cycles and reduce the impact of human activity on them. These need to go hand-in-hand with optimizing water and wastewater provision and consumption, and will require closer collaboration between utilities, users and regulators to incentivize water conservation, reuse and recycling.

India Scenario

Capital expenditure on water and wastewater infrastructure in India is set to increase by 83% over the next five years, hitting an annual run rate of $16 billion by 2020. The utility market is set to top $14 billion within five years, while annual spending in the industrial sector will approach $2 billion. Due to the central and state governments' renewed vigour in propounding the reduction and eventual elimination of pollution in India's rivers, the wastewater treatment sector is expected to grow faster than water treatment, exhibiting a CAGR of 15.3% to reach $6.78 billion in 2020, up from $3.3 billion in 2015. Spending on water supply will grow from $5.56 billion to $9.4 billion over the next five years.

The present government has unveiled initiatives that promise to transform India's rival those in developed nations. In order to speed up the construction of water and wastewater projects across the country, the government is adding new incentive tools – such as priority release of budget allocations on the basis of reforms implemented by states in the previous year – whilst also undertaking a review of water tariffs.

The Atal Mission for Rejuvenation and Urban Transformation (AMRUT) – the present government's successor to the JNNURM – and the Smart Cities Mission are aimed at realising the government's ambition of bringing the quality of India's water supply and sanitation to a level currently enjoyed by developed economies. INR 500 billion ($7.7 billion) has been allocated for investment in 500 towns and cities under AMRUT, with INR480 billion ($7.4 billion) put aside for upgrading 100 cities to attain 'smart' status. Water and wastewater infrastructure is anticipated to constitute up to 40% of the total investment under these initiatives.

The Indian Rivers Inter-link is a proposed large-scale civil engineering project that aims to effectively manage water resources in India by linking Indian rivers by a network of reservoirs and canals and so reduce persistent floods in some parts and water shortages in other parts of India.

The Inter-link project has been split into three parts: a northern Himalayan rivers inter-link component, a southern Peninsular component and starting 2005, an intrastate rivers linking component. The project is being managed by India's National Water Development Agency (NWDA), under its Ministry of Water Resources. NWDA has studied and prepared reports on 14 inter-link projects for Himalayan component, 16 inter-link projects for Peninsular component and 37 intrastate river linking projects.

STEEL PIPE INDUSTRY

Pipes are a prominent and integral part of every human being's everyday life, which include transportation of fluid products over long distance such as water, oil & gas, sewage & sanitation, etc. Steel pipes are one of the types used in the pipe industry for both industrial and housing purposes. Steel pipes are categorised as carbon steel pipe, stainless steel pipes and others. Carbon steel pipes are usually used in industrial processes involving extreme cold, high heat or for transporting gases, such as steam. Stainless steel has the quality to prevent from oxidation and corrosion, which makes it a widely used material nowadays. One more category that is structural steel pipes, used in the construction industry. Steel pipes are also used in numerous applications that involve the flow of fluid with a closed loop.

Different type of steel pipes requires different material in its manufacturing. Countries such as China, .S.A., India, and Japan are involved in heavy construction activities requiring large amount of steel. In the energy driven economy, it is necessary to construct advanced means of oil transportation, which has pressure and thermal resistance.

As per Nester Research, global steel pipes market is expected to grow at a compound annual growth rate of 3.6% during 2017-2024. Further, the global market is anticipated to reach 79.9 Million metric tons by the end of 2024. Rapid urbanization; development of new industries and growing construction activities across the world and development of oil & gas industries are some major factors which are projected to foster the growth of global market of steel pipes. Moreover, high strength and durability of steel pipes are one of the key reasons which are likely to fuel the growth of market.

Like other commodities, steel prices also have tendency to fluctuate as per the economic conditions, which has immediate impact on global steel pipes market, such as surging oil market, and European Brexit issue. The growth in government expenditure over the construction, pipeline projects and favorable regulation regarding production of steel are driving the global steel pipes market. In 2016, India introduced minimum import prices (MIP) across all steel products, benefitted the domestic producers revived the growth rate of India steel pipes market.

Based on geography, Asia-Pacific region accounted for largest market share of 53.1% in 2017 of global steel pipes market. High construction activities and developing oil & gas industries are some of the major factors which are expected to allow Asia Pacific to continue its dominance during the forecast period.

Major users of steel products are China, Japan and India owing to application of steel pipes in construction projects that has major share in China (21% of global construction projects), India (7%), and Japan (6%). Over the forecast period APAC is expected to continue its large market share for the demand of steel pipes across various industries in the developing countries. North America is the second leading market in steel pipes and is expected to witness satisfactory growth during 2017-24. Factors such as presence of large number of oil and gas industries and other sectors are envisioned to foster the growth of North America steel pipes market. Additionally, European region is also projected to grow at an acceptable pace which can be attributed to growing demand for steel pipes in end use industries in this region.
